Hunting Nazi Treasure
Viasat History 412

This series is about the greatest theft in history and one of the biggest treasure hunts in the world today. Between 1933 and 1945, the Nazis looted millions of cultural objects and hundreds of tons of gold bullion. They stole wedding rings and gold teeth fillings, uncut diamonds and crown jewels; they cleaned out museums, libraries, churches, synagogues, businesses, factories and family homes. Some of what was stolen remains missing today, including an estimated 100,000+ artworks with pieces by Degas, Van Gogh and Raphael; as well as caches of gold, diamonds, jewellery and other cultural treasures worth tens, if not hundreds, of millions. In 2007, a former CIA economist estimated the total value of still missing Nazi loot at $115-175 billion. The recovery effort began in the final days of the Second World War. It continues today.
